A British View of the American Tariff.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph.
"The promoters of the McKinley tariff meant it to push forward the policy of America for the Americans. One method of realizing it was to keep all work within their own dominions. The country was to be made self-sufficient which could be produced at home was not to be bought abroad. That was the key-note of the McKinley scheme, and it is working out the idea of its designers with the precision and effectiveness of a machine."

REPUBLICAN victory in the coming election would retard for a long time the progress of the sound commercial doctrines that underlie the commercial greatness of Great Britain and alone maintain British ascendancy.—London Evening News.

IN 1890 it was a conflict of predictions now our adversaries must face trade statistics and prices current.—President Harrison, June 21, 1892.

They Suggest Comparisons.
The Democratic politicians think they would like the Republican state ticket better if the head of it were not an obscure man. The inference is that in the Democratic estimation the head of the Democratic ticket is so far removed from obscurity that he is fit to be governor of West Virginia.

Until Mr. McCorkle entered on his campaign for the nomination he was no better known outside of his own county than any man in the first ten thousand that might be got together. Until he enlisted his fists in defense of the memory of the late Mr. Jefferson Davis he had not even been heard of.

Still, if he has the qualifications for the office and would administer it faithfully, no point is to be made against him because his name has not been a household word in West Virginia, because no steamboat or race horses have been named for him and the children have not been crying for MacCorkle for their governor.

Mr. Davis has been a resident of West Virginia for nearly fifty years, having been born in the state. He is widely known and well remembered by the men who have served with him in the army. In twenty counties around him he has for thirty years been known as a model business man. In the state senate he was relied on for his strength of character and business sense.

Mr. Davis is as well known and as well equipped to say the least as Johnson N. Camden was when nominated for governor by the Democratic party, as Mr.

Camden and Henry G. Davis were when they were sent to the senate of the United States. And to meet the objection that Thomas E. Davis is not a lawyer, but only a business man, will it offend anybody if it be asked whether Johnson N. Camden or Henry G. Davis is a lawyer?

There are a good many solid men in West Virginia who are not lawyers, a good many who think something might be gained by leaving the lawyers to their law while high grade business men of integrity and proved capacity for affairs try their hand at giving the people a business administration of the business of the state.

Point—No—Point.

The Register charges that the INTELLIGENCER purposely suppressed part of the speech of Mr. Elkins delivered in the Huntington convention. It happens that the INTELLIGENCER printed much more of the speech than the Register did.

The INTELLIGENCER telegraphed as much of the speech as it thought could be well handled by the telegraph company in connection with the great mass of convention proceedings being sent by the correspondents.

If there was any part of the strong speech which the Register thought of great importance and likely to be smothered by the INTELLIGENCER, that was its golden opportunity to get away with the opposition by a brilliant stroke of enterprise.

The speech was in manuscript and was at the disposal of anybody who desired it. One of the INTELLIGENCER's correspondents, having taken as much as he desired to telegraph, placed the whole speech at the disposal of the Register's correspondent. Since the Register did not avail itself of the opportunity it complains with ill grace of any omission by the INTELLIGENCER.

Before the campaign goes much further Mr. Elkins will be heard at length, perhaps in Wheeling, on the issues of the campaign. Then the Register can keep its weather eye peeled for any omissions it may think the INTELLIGENCER will make.

It will give the INTELLIGENCER great pleasure to see that the Register gets a certified copy of the able speech drawn out at full length.

THE INTELLIGENCER admits frankly that it likes the way the Democratic politicians are starting their campaign against the Republican nominee for governor. The Democratic slogan is, Let no business man apply. We have no use for anybody but a lawyer.

Compensation of State Officers.
That the number of officeholders and expenses under the state government have increased in the past twenty years is certainly true, since it could not be otherwise in view of the immensely increased business of the government attendant upon increase of population and development.

Salaries of state officials cannot be raised except by constitutional amendment, hence the last acquiescence is pure falsehood and demagoguery, as is every section of the Republican state platform, which embodies the same grossly false charges.—Register.

O, you sly fox. What's the matter with the fees? There is the productive office of secretary of state, for example, over which there have been squabbles and will probably be more.

The fees of that office have been increased enormously, so much so that at this time the secretary of state is able to lay by something for himself after handing over a goodly share per annum to pay the Democratic cost of the Democratic steal of the seat to which General Goff was elected.

So public office becomes a "fence" for a public steal. Thanks for calling attention to the delicate little job.

EX-SENATORS J. N. CAMDEN and Henry G. Davis are advisory members of the West Virginia Democratic executive committee. Their function is to advise the committee how much current coin of the realm they will put up to carry the state for MacCorkle and free trade. The business need not take more of their time than is required to sign their John Hancock.

Why They Wait.

How very lofty we are becoming, to be sure. The nomination of a first class business man for governor makes us smile hard and strong. The counter and the counting room are beneath our dignified dignity. We are so devoted to the bar, we find feathered Democrats.

Business men are well enough in the legislature and Congress, but don't humiliate our Democratic pride by making a business man governor. At the very thought our rich, warm southern blood riles and leaps and swirls in turbulent torrents.

Nothing short of something or other in the professional way will keep us from plunging into the suicide of despair. This is why we wait and delight to make ourselves miserably unhappy.

The sun lets up a little, but when he cools his hands for a fresh bolt, stand from under!

This year the Republicans of West Virginia have resolved to give the lawyers a rest while business men see what they can do with the business of the state. Quite a change in the weather, isn't it?

This Is What It Means.

Mr. Henry Watterson is an honest man, and he puts his honesty into his newspaper. Moreover, he understands what the Democratic tariff plank means because helped to make it and did valiant service to put it through the convention. Thinking it well to reply to Mr. Watterson's friend Halstead, the Courier-Journal lets go in this straightforward, hard-hitting fashion:

Just as soon as the Democrats get the power they will wipe out the atrocious Republican sugar bounty system and restore the sugar tariff. Instead of paying millions of dollars to the Treasury to sugar planters, we will establish the revenue tariff on sugar, yielding annually about fifty millions to the Treasury. Put that in your old clay pipe, Mr. Halstead, and smoke it, and smoke it like thunder!

And more we tell you, hangry Robber Baron or words to that effect—and even in thy pitch of pride—the duties on wool, salt, lumber, coal, iron—everything that enters into the living of the people and the life of the poor—will have to come off, or come down! See? We mean to rip up, exterminate, abolish, annihilate, and in the foulest ignominy and disgrace, every vestige of the fraud called protection, wherever we can find it and, as fast as the needs of the government, increased ten-fold by the Republican party, will permit. See? Because now, as evermore, until the Robber Tariff is a thing of the past, and the Republican protectionism is as dead as African slavery, the Democratic law and gospel stands.

Duties on wool, salt, lumber, coal and iron will have to come off or come down. This hits West Virginia where she lives. Hit these products in the head and West Virginia stops still. An honest Democrat admits honestly that this is what his party proposes.

Democratic newspapers and stumpers in West Virginia will not thank Mr. Watterson for his frankness. It will embarrass them in their efforts to get protectionist votes for their free trade ticket.

Ask any honest Democratic teacher whether the Democratic or the Republican nominee for superintendent of free schools is the better man for the place, and he will tell you that Mr. Miller, the Republican nominee, heads the heap in West Virginia. It is not a political office, and the people should choose the best man no matter what party has nominated him.

Ask the men who know the Republican nominees best what they think of them. The ticket has character above reproach.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A novel clock, made of colonial cedar, the cases being forty feet high, will be sent to the World's Fair from Australia for the New South Wales colony. A group of figures, each twenty inches high, representing the federation convention, will be represented in the upper portion of the case, and each one is to rise from his seat in turn and deliver a speech on the federation. Each hour a large organ will play a tune inside the clock, and the astronomical facts of this unique piece of mechanism will be as wonderful as an entertaining. Visitors will be admitted to the interior of the clock and the tower.

A curiosity was lately found in a boatload of lobsters brought from New Brunswick waters. The strange crustacean was a bluish-white—one of the rare and remarkable albino lobsters. It was sent to Washington, where it is to become a part of the exhibit of the United States fish commission. Only one other white lobster has been taken in these or any other waters.

The 250th anniversary of the founding of Montreal will be celebrated in September. One of the features will be an exhibition of valuable historical relics connected with the early history of Canada.

Isaac Leadbetter, of Pulpit Harbor, Me., lost nearly 6,000 lobsters lately, that he had confined in a pond, by a quantity of fresh water flowing into it and killing them.

Kansas is named from its principal river. A tribe of Indians, formerly in that locality were known as the Konsoos or Kows, and the state is probably named from them.

PERSONAL POINTS.

The statue of John P. Hale, presented to the state of New Hampshire by Senator William E. Chandler, was unveiled in the state-house yard at Concord on Wednesday. Among the distinguished persons present were Fred Douglass, of Washington, Galusha A. Grow, Mrs. John P. Hale, George S. Boutwell and the venerable ex-Governor D. S. Berry, of Bristol.

A son of the great violinist Joachim, a lieutenant in an infantry regiment quartered at Frankfurt, was recently removed from the roll of officers at the request of his colonel because his father took part in a concert at Frankfurt. This performance, in the opinion of the colonel, "was incompatible with the dignity of the German uniform."

Including life insurance, Cyrus Field's estate is estimated at $300,000. Several years ago it was $1,000,000. Six oil paintings and forty-seven water-color paintings, illustrative of the laying of the Atlantic cable, he willed to the New York Historical society.

Colonel John Sobieski, the candidate of the Prohibition party for governor of Missouri, is said to be a direct descendant of the famous King John Sobieski, of Poland, the deliverer of Vienna.

It is said that President Angell, of the University of Michigan, can call the name and recognize the face of nearly every one of his 2,600 students.

General Oliver L. Spaulding, assistant secretary of the United States treasury, who has been making a tour of Europe, has sailed for home.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railway company will make a historical exhibit at the World's Fair which will be of absorbing interest to all railroad men. Major J. W. Pangborn has charge of its preparation. The Baltimore & Ohio claims to be the oldest railroad in the world, its two or three predecessors having been mere tramways for transporting coal, stone or ore. The actual construction of the road began on July 4, 1828, and its first section was in operation six months before the Liverpool & Manchester road, the first railroad, in the present sense of the word, in Europe. The Baltimore & Ohio claims also to be the only one of the pioneer roads which has retained its original name and has remained under a continuous succession of management.

Fully 100,000 men, it is believed, will participate in the parade on the occasion of the dedication of the World's Fair buildings in October. Such is the estimate of Secretary Culp, of the committee having the preparation for the ceremonies in charge. He says that acceptances are very numerous to the invitation to civic and fraternal societies to participate. The multitudes and "regulars" who will participate will number about 10,000.

The New York State Board of Charities is preparing an industrial exhibit for the World's fair of the products of the charitable, corrective, reformatory and eleemosynary institutions under its supervision. The exhibit will contain photographs, models, illustrations of the various methods of instruction, statistics, and a comparison showing the progress of work for the past twenty-five years.

More than 200 panels of native woods will enter into the interior decoration of the Washington World's Fair building. Some of them will be carved and others decorated with paintings of Washington scenery and groupings of flowers, fruits, grains, fish, game, birds, etc.

Rhode Island will present its World's Fair building to Chicago after the exposition closes. The structure will be very picturesque in appearance, being a reproduction in part of the famous "Old Stone Mill" at Newport.

The German exhibit at the World's fair will contain an architectural display including drawings illustrating 200 or more of the most notable buildings in the empire.

A "model of the figure of Lot's wife in salt" will appear in the Kansas World's fair exhibit to represent or illustrate the salt industry of the state.

The Chamber of Commerce of Calais, France, has contributed 2,000 francs towards the expense of making a show of French lace at the World's Fair.
